the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a vision of a new mental health system, which will be based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and wishes.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care and treatment.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in their own homes and communities.

These principles are reflected in the new Mental Health Act 2003, which came into force in 2005.

The new Act is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in their own homes and communities.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care and treatment.
- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and wishes.

The new Act is a landmark in the history of mental health care in the UK. It represents a fundamental change in the way that people with mental health problems are treated.
