

Mental Health in the African American Community

- African American men are 2.5 times more likely to die from suicide than African American women.
- African American men are 2.5 times more likely to die from suicide than African American women.
- African American men are 2.5 times more likely to die from suicide than African American women.

About Chester L. Wilson, EdD

Dr. Chester L. Wilson is a professor of psychology and director of the Center for the Study of African American Mental Health at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

He has published numerous articles and books on the mental health of African American men and women. His most recent book, African American Men and Mental Health: A Cultural Perspective, was published in 2011. He is also the author of African American Men and Mental Health: A Cultural Perspective, which was published in 2011. He is also the author of African American Men and Mental Health: A Cultural Perspective, which was published in 2011.

Dr. Wilson is also a frequent speaker at national and international conferences on the mental health of African American men and women. He is also a frequent speaker at national and international conferences on the mental health of African American men and women.

African American men are 2.5 times more likely to die from suicide than African American women. African American men are 2.5 times more likely to die from suicide than African American women. African American men are 2.5 times more likely to die from suicide than African American women.